

SUMMARY: The document below is a Court of Wards summary of accounts for the two-year period from Lady Day (March 25) 1562 to Lady Day 1564 for certain manors which came to Oxford as a joint-purchaser with his father. In the legal language of the day, a purchaser was someone who acquired property, especially land, in any way other than by inheritance.

Under the heading ‘charges’, the accounts show the rents and other income received, and under the heading ‘reprises’, the expenditures incurred and the sums delivered to the Court of Wards.

The gross income from these manors for the two years from 25 March 1562 to 25 March 1564 is as follows:

Christian Malford	£102 14s 7d di qa
Thornecombe	£162 4s 10d iiijlli
Colbrooke	£68 23d
Cornwall	£95 5s 6d
Chesham Higham & Chesham Bury	£162 8s 9-1/2d
Whitchurch & Aston Sandford	£91 3d
Castle Camps	£109 3s
Great Abingdon	£50 2s 11d
Acton Trussell	£64 11s 10d

The total of £905 13s 7-12d for the two-year period in question, when divided by 2, yields an average gross revenue for a single year for these manors of £452 16s 10d. The net revenue was, of course, less than that, as shown by the various expenditures under the heading ‘reprises’. The accounts indicate that the income was not always regular; there were often arrearages owing. In fact, the figures given in TNA SP 12/44/19, ff. 41-50, a document which records the receipts for the first five and half years of Oxford’s wardship from the lands which came to Oxford as purchaser, indicates that because of arrearages, the average net yearly receipt from these properties was only £372 a year.

In addition to the manors mentioned above, Oxford derived income during his minority from five other manors (Horstead, Newsells and Barkway in Hertfordshire, Elmsthorpe in Leicestershire, and Fleet in Kent), as well as the profits of his office of Lord Great Chamberlain. The net income from these five additional manors, and from the office of Lord Great Chamberlain, is given in WARD 8/13:

Horstead	£32
Newsells	£16 16s
Barkway	£25 18s 8-1/2d
Elmsthorpe	£45 15s
Fleet	£38
Office of Lord Great Chamberlain	£106 13s 4d

The total net income from these five additional manors and the office of Lord Great Chamberlain is £265 3s 1/2d per annum. Again, arrearages must be taken into consideration. In addition, the Archbishop of Canterbury received one-third of the income from the manor of Fleet during Oxford's minority, although that fact is not reflected in the figure given in WARD 8/13, which dates from 1564, because the Archbishop did not formally pursue his claim until 1567.

The figures given in this document, supplemented with figures from WARD 8/13, thus indicate that Oxford's total net income from all sources during his minority was approximately £637 per year, a figure which accords with the total of £643 5s 1-1/4d given in WARD 8/13 for income received by Oxford from all sources in the accounting year 1563-1564. An income of this size was likely inadequate to support the life of an Elizabethan courtier with a retinue of dependent servants. Oxford must therefore have accumulated debts during his minority, and it is not surprising that he had no cash available when he came of age to pay the crushing fines totalling £3300 exacted against him by the Queen in the Court of Wards for suing his livery and for his wardship and marriage.

For an account of the revenues from these manors for a period of 5-1/2 years ending at Michaelmas 1567, see TNA SP 12/44/19.
